Dear Subscriber

We are proud to announce on page 11 of this issue a major development in the continuing story of The Micro User.

We spare no efforts in our determination to maintain this magazine as the complete solution for all BBC and Acorn users. The next issue you receive will be bigger and better in so many respects that we have marked the change with a new name: Acorn Computing.

What does this mean for you, the most loyal of all readers of this magazine?

Firstly, you are assured of more and better magazine content, whether your interest lies with the BBC alone, or alternatively you are one of the many who have access to both the BBC and the Archimedes. We aim to maintain Acorn Computing as the premium magazine for BBC users, keeping you up to date with the latest developments in the Acorn world as well as continuing to help you get the very most from your BBC Micro.

Secondly, while casual purchasers of Acorn Computing will henceforth pay £2.95 for a magazine carrying an Archimedes disc on every issue, you will benefit from the changes for no extra cost. You will continue to receive your subscription copy, complete with your chosen format BBC discs packed with original programs and previews of the newest and best software, for the duration of your current subscription.

What is more, we are offering you an opportunity to continue to receive this preferential subscription rate beyond the term of your current subscription. If you choose now to extend your current subscription by six or twelve months, using the special offer form on the reverse of this letter, you will be registered as a loyal subscriber, and need only pay at the old rate for an additional six or twelve issues of the new-look Acorn Computing, including your BBC format discs. Please complete the form overleaf and return to the address above by 16 September 1992.

Remember, every issue of your subscription will come with your subscribers' BBC disc!

Yours sincerely

Steve Turnbull
